

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A baton holder including baton holster including a central member with front, rear, right, and left sides, and an aperture defined in the front side; a belt loop device integrally engaged on the rear side of the central member configured to receive a belt to suspend the baton holster; a right support member integrally engaged on the right side of the central member; a left support member integrally engaged on the left side of the central member; and a universal baton support with a longitudinally extending member configured for removably being placed within the aperture on the front side of the central member, and for enabling the universal baton support to pivot 360° about a pivot point within the aperture.